

Sir Charles

As Atlanta building owners scramble to land big office tenants, Jackson Oats Shaw recently landed something potentially even bigger — the star power of NBA Hall of Famer, would-be PGA champion and newly minted reality TV icon Charles Barkley.

Barkley came to practice his swing in the golf simulator at Jackson Oats Shaw's Centennial Tower downtown, which houses JOS Golf Center and its on-site PGA professional.

The Golf Center drew the popular Golf Channel series "The Haney Project," on which "Sir Charles" can be seen trying to perfect his swing.

World renowned golf instructor Hank Haney, having mentored more than 200 PGA and LPGA Tour professionals, including Tiger Woods, is training Barkley, who currently owns perhaps the ugliest hack in golf.

Barkley spent time blasting 300-yard simulated drives in Centennial Tower, while being filmed for the Haney Project episodes "One Day Work Week" and "Meltdown in Atlanta."
